

two-

Populusgue Rontanw, was one which had the glory of fifteen centuries upon it; and, as if to show that the Papal sovereign was gone, St. Peter's was turned into a fortress, But Rome could not play for long the part of a Milan, and stirred uneasily at the thought of a restoration of the Pope by the German King with Bernard of Glairvaux in his train.

Therefore, just before Christmas, Eugcnius rode back amid popular rejoicings into the Holy City, on the understanding that the Senate should receive investiture from him, and that the Patri-cius should disappear in favour of a Papal prefect,

There rode into Rome, along with the Pontiff, one of the most striking of that Arnold of Brescia is one of those men whom their principles and the bold enunciation of them have made remarkable in history, but on great-ness, because the great opportunity never to them, we cannot decide, Isolated, unbefriendedi with little arena or none, the great movements of his age had little place for him, and, dying in & good cause, he has scarcely earned the name of a martyr.

Bom somewhere early in the twelfth century in Brescia, Arnold received m time priest's and went to Paris to study theology.

There he sat at the feet of Abelard, and the ing which did much to his after-life* Returning to Brescia, he prior of an tinian House, but his vigorous mind not